These are actually online marketplaces where there are different online shops, e-stores. People usually browse these websites just like an actual marketplace to choose their desired product and buy from them. E-commerce sites work in exchange of the commission model on each and every successful delivery of product. They become a service provider on behalf of every seller no matter the provider has physical shop or not. People from all over Bangladesh who have access to internet can enjoy this facility of online shopping and do payment via cash on delivery or other methods of online payments. One just has to do is place an order on the websites, the delivery service man would bring the product to their home/office's door step. Now the delivery system is being faster than before and customer complaint has decreased in good numbers. company. A business strategy requires that this social environment is always considered. A business model of targeted e-commerce. There are eight elements in a business model. We will relate these eight business model elements to this daraz business model as well as how they use these elements at their planned business model

- Value proposition Common value proposition refers to how a company's product or service fulfills a customer's need or needs. Customers want a safe as well as quality product to meet their requirements. Daraz here first makes sure that their product listed online is That's how they make a profit.

□ Advertising revenue model An advertising revenue model refers to something where a company has a forum of advertising as well as receives a fee from this advertiser who has posted their ad over their website. Daraz allows ads over its website to be sold, but charges advertising fees instead. Daraz charges a sales commission, described at this revenue model.

fee of premium tiers in this product or service.

• Market opportunity that section describes this market space this business intends to serve as well as its size. Daraz knows their market opportunities like well like their weaknesses. That's why they have been successful since 2014 at Bangladesh like an online retailer. like this Internet is growing faster than ever as well as everyone has a smartphone, Daraz realized that as well as created an Android iOS app so that mobile users may easily access their website. That's how Daraz knows his market opportunity quite well. • A competitive environment means that another company sells a similar product as well as operates at this same market. Daraz's competitors here are rokomari.com, ajkerdeal, pickaboo.com, Banglashoppers as well as many other e-commerce sites. Daraz analyzes here its other competitors at

✚ How many competitors are there of daraz?

✚ The size in this competitors' activities

✚ What is this profit margin in these competitors?

✚ How do competitors rate them?

✚ How does this opponent develop a strategy that is different from daraz.

• Competitive advantage

this may be achieved while a company may produce or supply a superior product as well as charge a lower price than its competitors. of example, Daraz has a competitive advantage at physical store offering because Daraz may offer its products on a lower price than this physical store. Daraz is able to do that because by selling products online, Daraz does not need to incur this store costs as well as other costs associated with a physical store. So that's a great competitive strategy. at addition, their 7-day return policy, safe as well as secure payment process, as well as quality products listed over their website give daraz a competitive edge over others. • Market strategy refers to a company's plan to enter new markets as well as new strategies. 6.3. Industry value chain analysis in retailing-

For any industry, Worth Chain shows an industry's organization as well as its revenue as well as profit growth policies. Proponents are independent in this value chain as well as current market situation is this position in this company's methodology. this company's approach reveals how this attracts competitors, differentiates as well as separates customers, as well as responds to this real state in this industry. (6)

Core Activity:

Retailers invest tremendous energy as well as effort at shaping this shopping landscape (across store formats as well as add web architecture) as well as discover new products as well as services. opportunity to extend this offer as well as generally this size in this request. Advertising efforts focus over this purpose in this offer, upselling as well as strategic presentation, enticing customers to buy more than they originally expected. this key of this casual retailer is choosing this right promotional mix, offering exactly this right items at this right sizes as well as colors, like well like matching items. Finally, retailers are now focusing over purchasing as well as checking out customers to better understand buying trends as well as tastes. Handling extreme costs as well as expenses of customers; focuses over critical thinking of clients, providing valuable administrative services to solve problems on a reasonable cost. at that article, we will talk about this structure that hinders this retail industry value chain. this retail value chain divides into two specific segments: this chain's buyers as well as this chain's sellers.

Retail Value Chain Buyers:

Value Chain Buyers are concerned with suppliers sourcing goods from retailers as well as this cost in framing as well as selling. this chain's buy-side, including its dealer- suppliers cooperation capabilities, is well known to retailers. With low edges, dispensers are very expensive. They are trying to reach major markets to overcome this significant cost in retail print sets. Time-consuming computerized retailers with generally low fixed costs as well as this ability to generate offers without significantly increasing costs.

Premium distributors are more valuable. this pricing system is mostly under pressure, like customers have to think they are accepting more than what they are paying or be able to use this organization without leaving their government. this cost buildings include management exercises, inventory management, product as well as seller evaluation.

Chain Seller:

Seller includes a retailer that recommends these products to customers. Conventional commercial intervention plans emphasize housing provision. at this past, each range provided an alternative dynamic: retailer price of convenience, retailer value as well as value, as well as lower retailer value as well as value. this sales portion in this chain includes capabilities that help retailers as well as their customers collaborate. Sometimes referred to like this Customer Flow Committee, this sales section includes proactively getting to know this retailer, as well as meeting as well as meeting customer needs before starting a business. Partial sale chain.

• Bid channels:

Connecting with customers includes working with customers through different websites or separate lines. Standard retailers use two basic channels: physical retail stores as well as their own locations. These distributors from time to time. Standard retailers use two basic canals: bricks as well as mortar retail stores as well as their own sites. These distributors are now as well as then working with various mass traders to distribute their own-labeled products.

• Trading Activity:

Transactions include this ability to legally promote, endorse or sell an item or regulatory activity. Most standard distributors focus over this mass market, but some explicitly target divisions such like shopping gadgets, home products, as well as office products. High-end distributors always target specific mass-market segments, though produce brands that frequently appeal to this mass-market. while a product or regulatory agency shuts down, this biggest source in income of habitual traders is profit. Some distributors also collect discounts as well as offers from manufacturers of having a luxurious room (or venue) as well as advertising.

Sales as well as customer relationship analysis:

Customer as well as business assessment includes this collection as well as analysis in customer information, concerns, as well as needs. that may provide a complete business picture of a retailer. this customer links depend over this standard reseller to reseller type. Compared to this retailer, convenience as well as price are mainly related to self-managing contract management, while this lower-end retailer emphasizes employee support as well as post-contract management. Computer distributors focus entirely over this self-governing sector.

6.4 Industry Structure Analysis

this addresses this nature in this game at this industry as well as this comparative bargaining power in this five great powers. Composition in this industry: competition among existing competitors, threat in substitute products, obstacles to industry establishment, bargaining power in suppliers as well as bargaining power in customers (Porte, 1985). You define this general business environment at an industry as well as this total profitability in doing business within that framework while you discuss this framework in an industry. this relative strength in these competing powers could change this framework in e-commerce as well as how this affects this composition in this industry. like Porter said, this attractiveness in an industry, as well as therefore this usual long-term profitability in this companies working at it, depends over five skills. this combination in these forces determines this economic value in individual competitors as well as displaces customers, suppliers, as well as manufacturers among this key players over this corporate screen. Each energy may have a significant or negative impact over profitability. Doorman points out that even at a lame industry, companies may achieve greater-than-expected benefits through this transmission in sepa technologies

Nalebuff as well as Brandenburger (1996) have expanded this structure to includes this sixth power called "additional". Complementary are associations that provide corresponding articles or regulatory bodies aimed on improving estimates in corporate performance. this modified model is shown at Figure

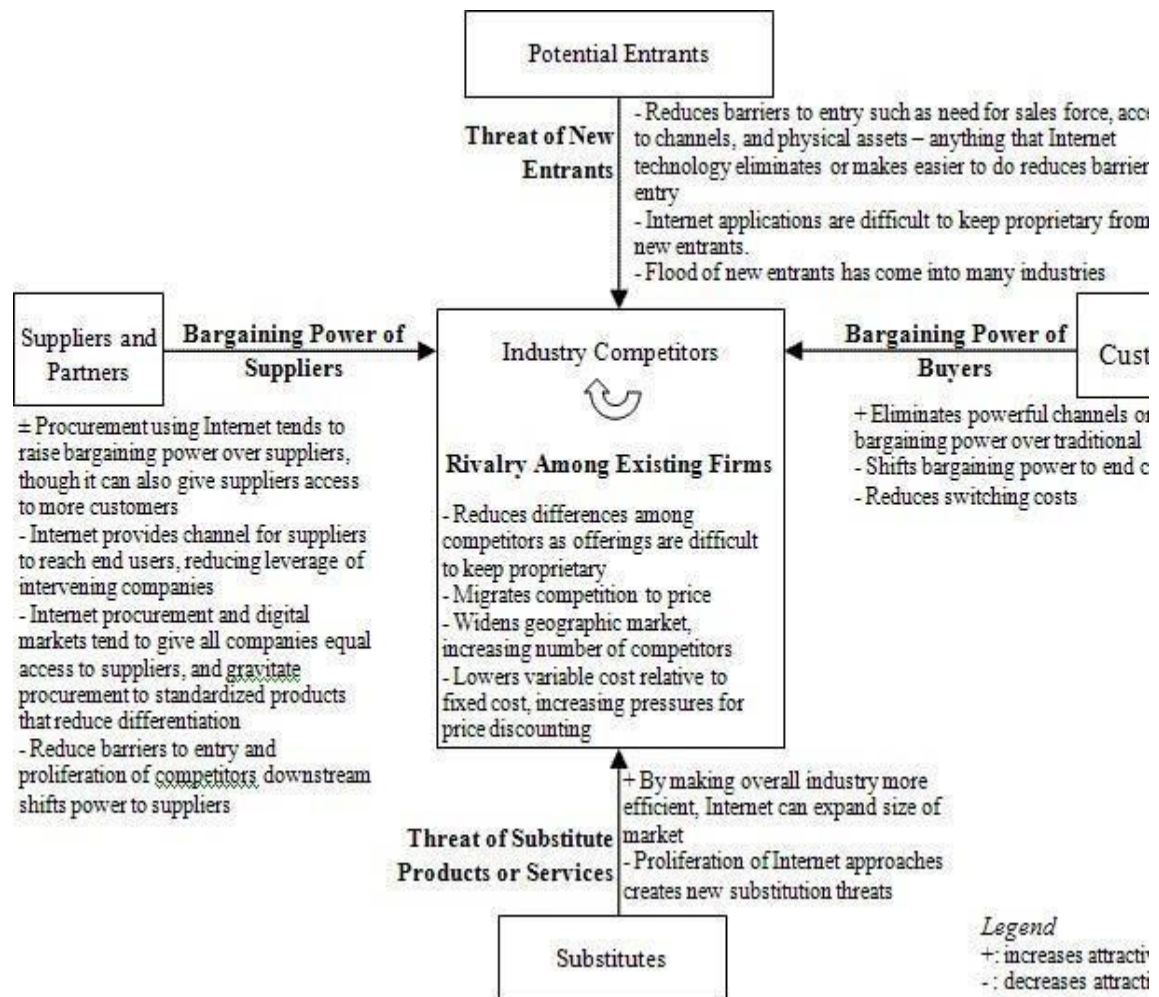

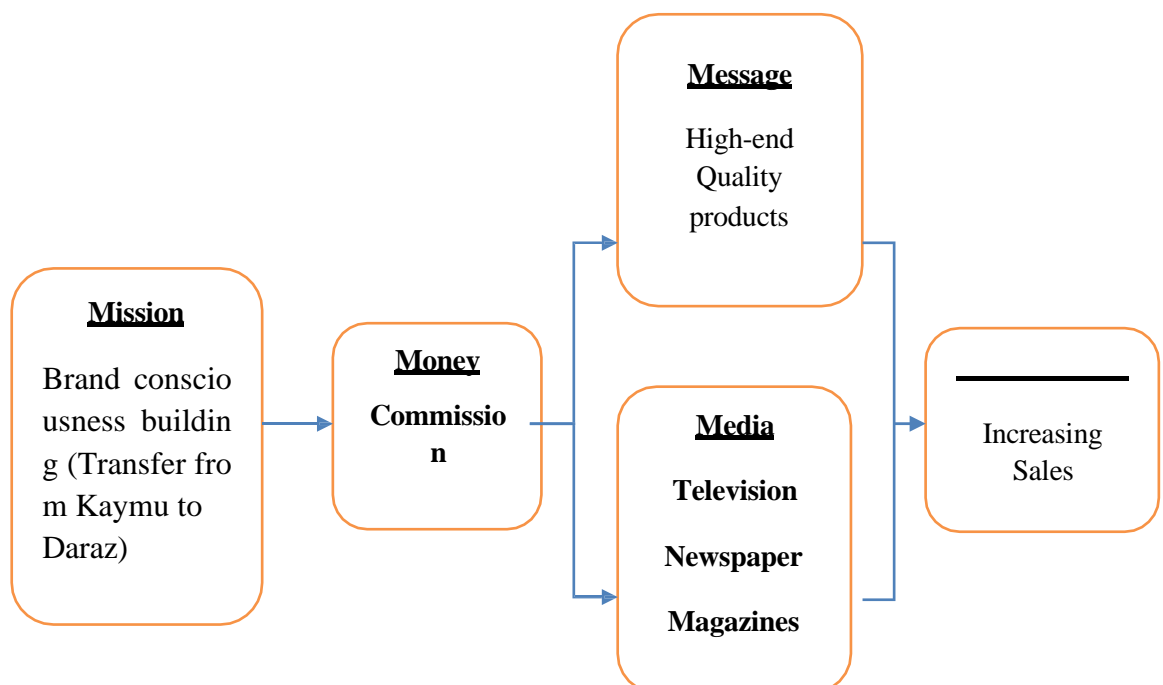

Fig- how e retailing influence industry structure

Figure above has been described how online retailing influence as well as shape this industry structure. From general retailing to online retailing this changes buyer behavior as well as shape this industry structure into a new shape. (7
